Maximize your Sponsorship

A sponsorship sales plan provides a systematic means to activate and evaluate your sponsorship investment. Sponsors who follow a carefully thought out strategy report the best results from their sponsorship experience. Here are a few suggestions:

Before the Event

As a sponsor, your firm's logo will appear in the paper, online and in targeted direct email advertising promoting the event. This pre-event marketing campaign positions your company as an industry leader in the eyes of key decision-makers who read our paper and pay to attend our events.

- Have your CEO or company leader announce your sponsorship to all employees. Proudly announce your sponsorship to the public by creating an area on your website to promote your partnership with the San Francisco Business Times.
- Select key members of management and the sales team who are comfortable at networking events to attend the event for business development purposes.
- Don't overlook the benefits of inviting clients and prospects to the event as well.
- Set goals for the number of qualified leads, appointments and sales your employees will achieve at the event.
- Schedule training to ensure your employees know how to quickly qualify prospects and communicate key selling benefits.
- Preview the supplied attendee list and assign executives and sales personnel to meet certain prospects.
- Determine if other sponsors for the event could be customers or partners.
- Send a gift or promotional item to key prospects attending to encourage them to meet you at the event.
- Give your top prospect list to your SFBT Account Executive, so he or she can watch or them arriving at the event and make important introductions.

- Develop your post-event activation strategy to continue the relationship with key contacts you meet at the event.
- Develop a tracking report listing key milestones a prospect must pass through before becoming a client.

At the Event

As a sponsor, your company is essentially a co-host of the event. Your company logo is prominently displayed, and many events offer sponsors a speaking opportunity with a personal introduction from the publisher. Take full advantage of the impressive stage the San Francisco Business Times provides to position your company as an industry leader in an environment where you will clearly have an edge on your competition. And you'll have access to a room full of prospects you have already pre-qualified from the attendee list.

- Hold a meeting with your staff members immediately before the event to review key objectives and announce incentive to reward.
- Help out at the event or provide a small handout to each attendee as they enter the networking area. This allows you to say hello to each guest and identify those you most want to meet.
- Assign some staff to tables that aren't corporate tables.
- Team some of our staff with key clients so they can speak about their relationship with your firm and also meet new prospects themselves.

After the Event

Hundreds of influential business leaders leave the event with a positive impression about your company. You've reinforced relationships with existing clients, which in turn helps with customer retention. Your sales team made connections with impending new partners and top prospects as outlined in our first new business development strategy for the event. You now have a limited period of time to build on the critical first impression created at the event. What you do next ultimately determines your ability to cost justify your investment.

- Conduct a post-event recap meeting with your employees who attended the event to review successes and award prizes.
- Announce an incentive to reward your sales people for timely reporting of the sales status of each key prospect. Compile a written recap of the event to help renew the sponsorship. Include quotes from internal and external guests, photos, and review results versus goals.
- Send company literature or a dated special offer to everyone on the final attendee list supplied by SFBT.
- Invite your key prospects to your activation event. This should take place within 30 days of your first meeting.
- Publicize your sponsorship by sending press releases to trade groups and trade publications and journals.
- Lastly, build on the success you generated this year by taking advantage of your first right of renewal of your sponsorship.

Corporate Philanthropy Awards

SIT DOWN BREAKFAST AND AWARDS PRESENTATION

Our annual report on the state of Corporate Philanthropy in the Bay Area is an essential and intriguing read for both business and nonprofit executives. The program has created a friendly competition with companies vying to be the most generous. Businesses are giving more and community organizations are reaping the rewards. The publication includes articles on trends in corporate philanthropy, profiles of the region's top corporate philanthropists and stories about best practices in corporate philanthropy from both large and small businesses.

Program Structure

This inspiring breakfast forum brings together leaders from the Top Corporate Philanthropists and CEOs and board members from the nonprofits who receive their funding. In addition to unveiling our latest List, we present awards for Education, Health, and Innovation in Philanthropy, Community Commitment and Community Impact. The awards presentation is followed by a panel discussion featuring a diverse group of leaders in corporate philanthropy discussing their philanthropic practices, philosophies and policies.

Health and Benefits Innovations Forum

BREAKFAST FORUM AND PANEL DISCUSSION

With many changes and innovations in health and benefits plans, and many innovations coming from providers and insurers, employers are challenged to stay on top of the latest information, programs and best practices that best serve their employees and their bottom line. Employers can learn much from the experts, and also from each other about the impact of wellness and prevention programs and other practices and benefits that can produce measurable results. This in-depth report and event will look at what regional employers, health care and benefits leaders and experts are saying about programs, practices and policies that are making a difference, setting new standards, and impacting quality of care, employee satisfaction, healthy outcomes and healthy bottom lines for employers.

Program Structure

Our panel of industry experts, health care providers and employers will look at what programs and practices are having the biggest impact. How well are providers and insurers meeting the needs of employers, and how are they addressing the larger issues of promoting programs that result in a healthier workforce and society, and the need to reduce overall health care costs while delivering quality care? We'll look at some of the most innovative programs coming out of our region, and we'll also look at what companies are doing to reduce their benefits costs and improve the health of their workforce. This program will offer insights and practical advice for what employers should know as they plan their benefits programs, and what options are available to them and their employees.
