Dear Judge Robreno,

Thank you for taking time from your busy schedule to read through my letter. I am Kashamba's oldest brother. We were both raised by the same mother and father in the same household. We are a very close family and often times disagree with Kashamba's decisions in life. Although we disagree with him, he happens to be a very loving person and awesome father to his son. Now that he is a father this experience has really humbled him in a different way. Meaning I believe that once everything is said and done and he is released from custody, his main focus is going to be raising his son. Although I disagree with most of his charges, I respect the judicial process. I'm asking for you to have mercy on him during sentencing. He is a person that our family can always count on and his son needs him more than anything. I truly believe that once he returns to normal society, he will concentrate on being a parent first. So, please I beg you to consider that my brother still has a chance to become a productive citizen and loving father whose son needs him very much.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in black ink, consisting of a series of fluid, overlapping strokes that form the name 'Kambui John'.

Your Honor,

I value your effort and time you are taking to hear my input on the subject of Kashamba John. I am one of three, his older Sister, born to the same mother and father, and Kashamba is the last. I currently work as a Registered Nurse and student obtaining my Master's Degree to become a nurse practitioner. My brother is not by any means a perfect person, however, I do believe he is capable of change and can be a valuable asset to society despite his transgressions, to which I believe is a direct result of unresolved issues surrounding the death of our mother at a young age. I say this because even I have a hard time coping with her loss, however, I transfer my energy into my career. Unfortunately, Kashamba being the youngest, was not able to find a healthy way to cope and put that energy in to Gambling, which led to other things, I myself am not happy with him about. However, I am able to see the good that my parents has groomed within us. I have watched Kashamba as a father and he was an exceptional one at that. He focused on his son's education, taking him to the library daily to read as an infant, when the rest of the family criticized how his son at was too young to understand what was going on. However, before the age of one his son was able to identify his shapes, colors, and recognize sight words. This I believe was a direct result of Kashamba pouring into him. To this day, his son is advanced in school and able to articulate himself beyond what one expects for a child his age. I have a one-and-a-half-year-old son now and because of Kashamba, I did the very thing I chuckled about, with my son, and I am amazed at how intelligent he is.

Kashamba has impulsive issues at times but he loves and cares for others as well, especially children. In the neighborhood, on Sundays, he would buy a variety of snacks and have the neighborhood kids come outside to play baseball. They enjoyed and looked forward to "KJ" coming. His rational was it helped to keep them physically active and stimulate their minds to engage in other activities except just the video games. Even with his son, he entered him in baseball and was at his games and was chosen to be a parent coach. I could see his joy when he did these things. I feel this was a coping mechanism and one of a healthy kind and would have been more likely to aid in his change oppose to a sentence that takes away from this side of him over time. I personally believe he needs to be held accountable for his actions; however, a life sentence is not the answer in my humble opinion. Kashamba needs counseling for his addiction and positive outlets for coping, such as coaching a team and inspiring kids to do better within their personal lives. So, your Honor, I am asking for leniency on his sentencing, not because he is without fault, but because his issues are deeper than crime and he is capable of rehab through counseling.

With a Heavy Heart,
Sheena John

Dear Judge Robreno,

It is with a heavy heart on bended knees I humbly write this letter asking for mercy on behalf of my son Kashamba John. My name is Lenroy John father of Kashamba, and it's without Contest or bias but as a grieving father having to live with the consequences of his actions I am begging and pleading for leniency if I may. I think my son's problem was the gambling habit he developed at an early age and never got a handle on it. he was not necessarily a bad person he did bad things to foster his addiction and that's what brought him down. I know it may sound like I am trivializing it but that's what happens, when early intervention is not taken, little things become big things and then explode. But I do believe rehabilitation is possible and people do change, if given the right opportunity. Thanks in advance for your consideration and forgiveness.

Sincerely,

Lenroy John

Dear Judge Robreno,

Kashamba is my brother-in-law. I met him 8 years ago. In the short time that I have known him we have bonded on our educational and familial values. When spending time with his son it is evident the unmatched love that they have for one another. Seeing first hand through my students the impact of not having a parent present is sure to have made an impact on his son. The unconditional love can be felt by anyone who encounters him. During postpartum with my first son he brought me precooked meals. His support and care will never be forgotten. Once this case has concluded he will be able to return to his doting son and loving family. It is my opinion that in spite of his current charge with a violation of the law he is of good character and sound morals.

Sincerely,

Amber John

Dear Judge Robreno,

My name is Aamir I. Bey. I'm writing this letter in support of Kashamba John, who is approaching his sentencing by the court. I've been working as an Electrical Engineer for the past 6 years. Earlier this year, I was fortunate to be a founding member of Atlanta Writers' Society: A non-profit organization that supports underrepresented writers.

In order to talk about how I know Kashamba, I have to discuss my friendship with his older brother Kambui John. I met Kambui John in my freshman year of college in our Intro To Engineering class, which was the 2010-2011 academic year. Kambui John was pivotal in my success throughout my personal and professional life. As Kambui and I became close, he wanted to introduce me to his younger brother Kashamba John, as we were closer in age. Kashamba started going to school around that time where we bonded the most. Overtime, Kashamba has become a brother to me as well. Not only was he encouraging, but he was also supportive of my education and becoming a better person.

Since I've known Kashamba for this length of time, I know that he is a good person and I believe he will not reoffend again. Kashamba is always there when you need him and has matured so much over the span of time I have known him. I humbly request that you grant him mercy on sentencing. He has a son that loves him very much and I pray for the day they reunite. I trust that he will be able to stay on a positive path and avoid future issues, especially with friends and family checking on him. I want to thank you for taking the time to read this letter.

Sincerely,

Dear Judge, Robreno,

Thank you for taking time from your busy schedule to read my letter. I am Kashamba's older cousin, on his mother's side. It was the year 1990 when I first met him. He was about 2 ½ to 3 years old and surely, he was a character it was never a dull moment with him. Kasham, as we would often call him, was a funny, polite, smart child who always made sure to keep his grades on top. I believe kashamba is a productive member of society and will continue to be after this case is over. I have confidence in the fact that this case has taught kashamba to look at himself to see where he went wrong and calm himself down, but I know he is not a menace to society. Although I may not completely agree with the sentence, I understand justice shall always be served in court of law, but Your Honor, I am asking for some leniency in this case, please. Kashamba is a very important member of our family. I can always depend on him for advice when needed. Any lesser sentence granted unto him will be greatly appreciated, thank you.

Sincerely,

Sharon Knight Farrell
